WHY WAR

IS NEVER

A GOOD

IDEA

Though War speaks
Every language
It never knows
What to say
To frogs.

Picture frogs
Beside a pond
Holding their annual
Pre-rainy-season
Convention.

They do not see War
Huge tires
Of a
Camouflaged
Vehicle
About to Squash
Them flat.

Though War has a mind of its own
War never knows
Who
It is going
To hit.

Picture a donkey
Peacefully
Sniffing a pile
Of straw
A small boy
Holds
The end
Of its
Frayed
Rope
Bridle.

They do not see it
They are both thinking
Of dinner
The boy
Is hoping for
Polenta & eggs
Maybe a carrot
Or apple
For Dessert.

Just above
Them
Something dark
Big as
A car
Is Dropping.

Though War has eyes
Of its own
& can see oil
&
Gas
& mahogany trees
& every shining thing
Under
The earth

When it comes
To nursing
Mothers
It is blind;
Milk, especially Human,
It cannot See.

Picture a woman
Beside a window
She is blissful
Singing
A lullaby
A baby twirls
A lock of her
Dark hair
Suckles
For all
It is Worth.

They do not smell War
Dressed in
Green & brown
Imitating
Their fields
Marching slowly
Toward them
Up
The steep
Hill.

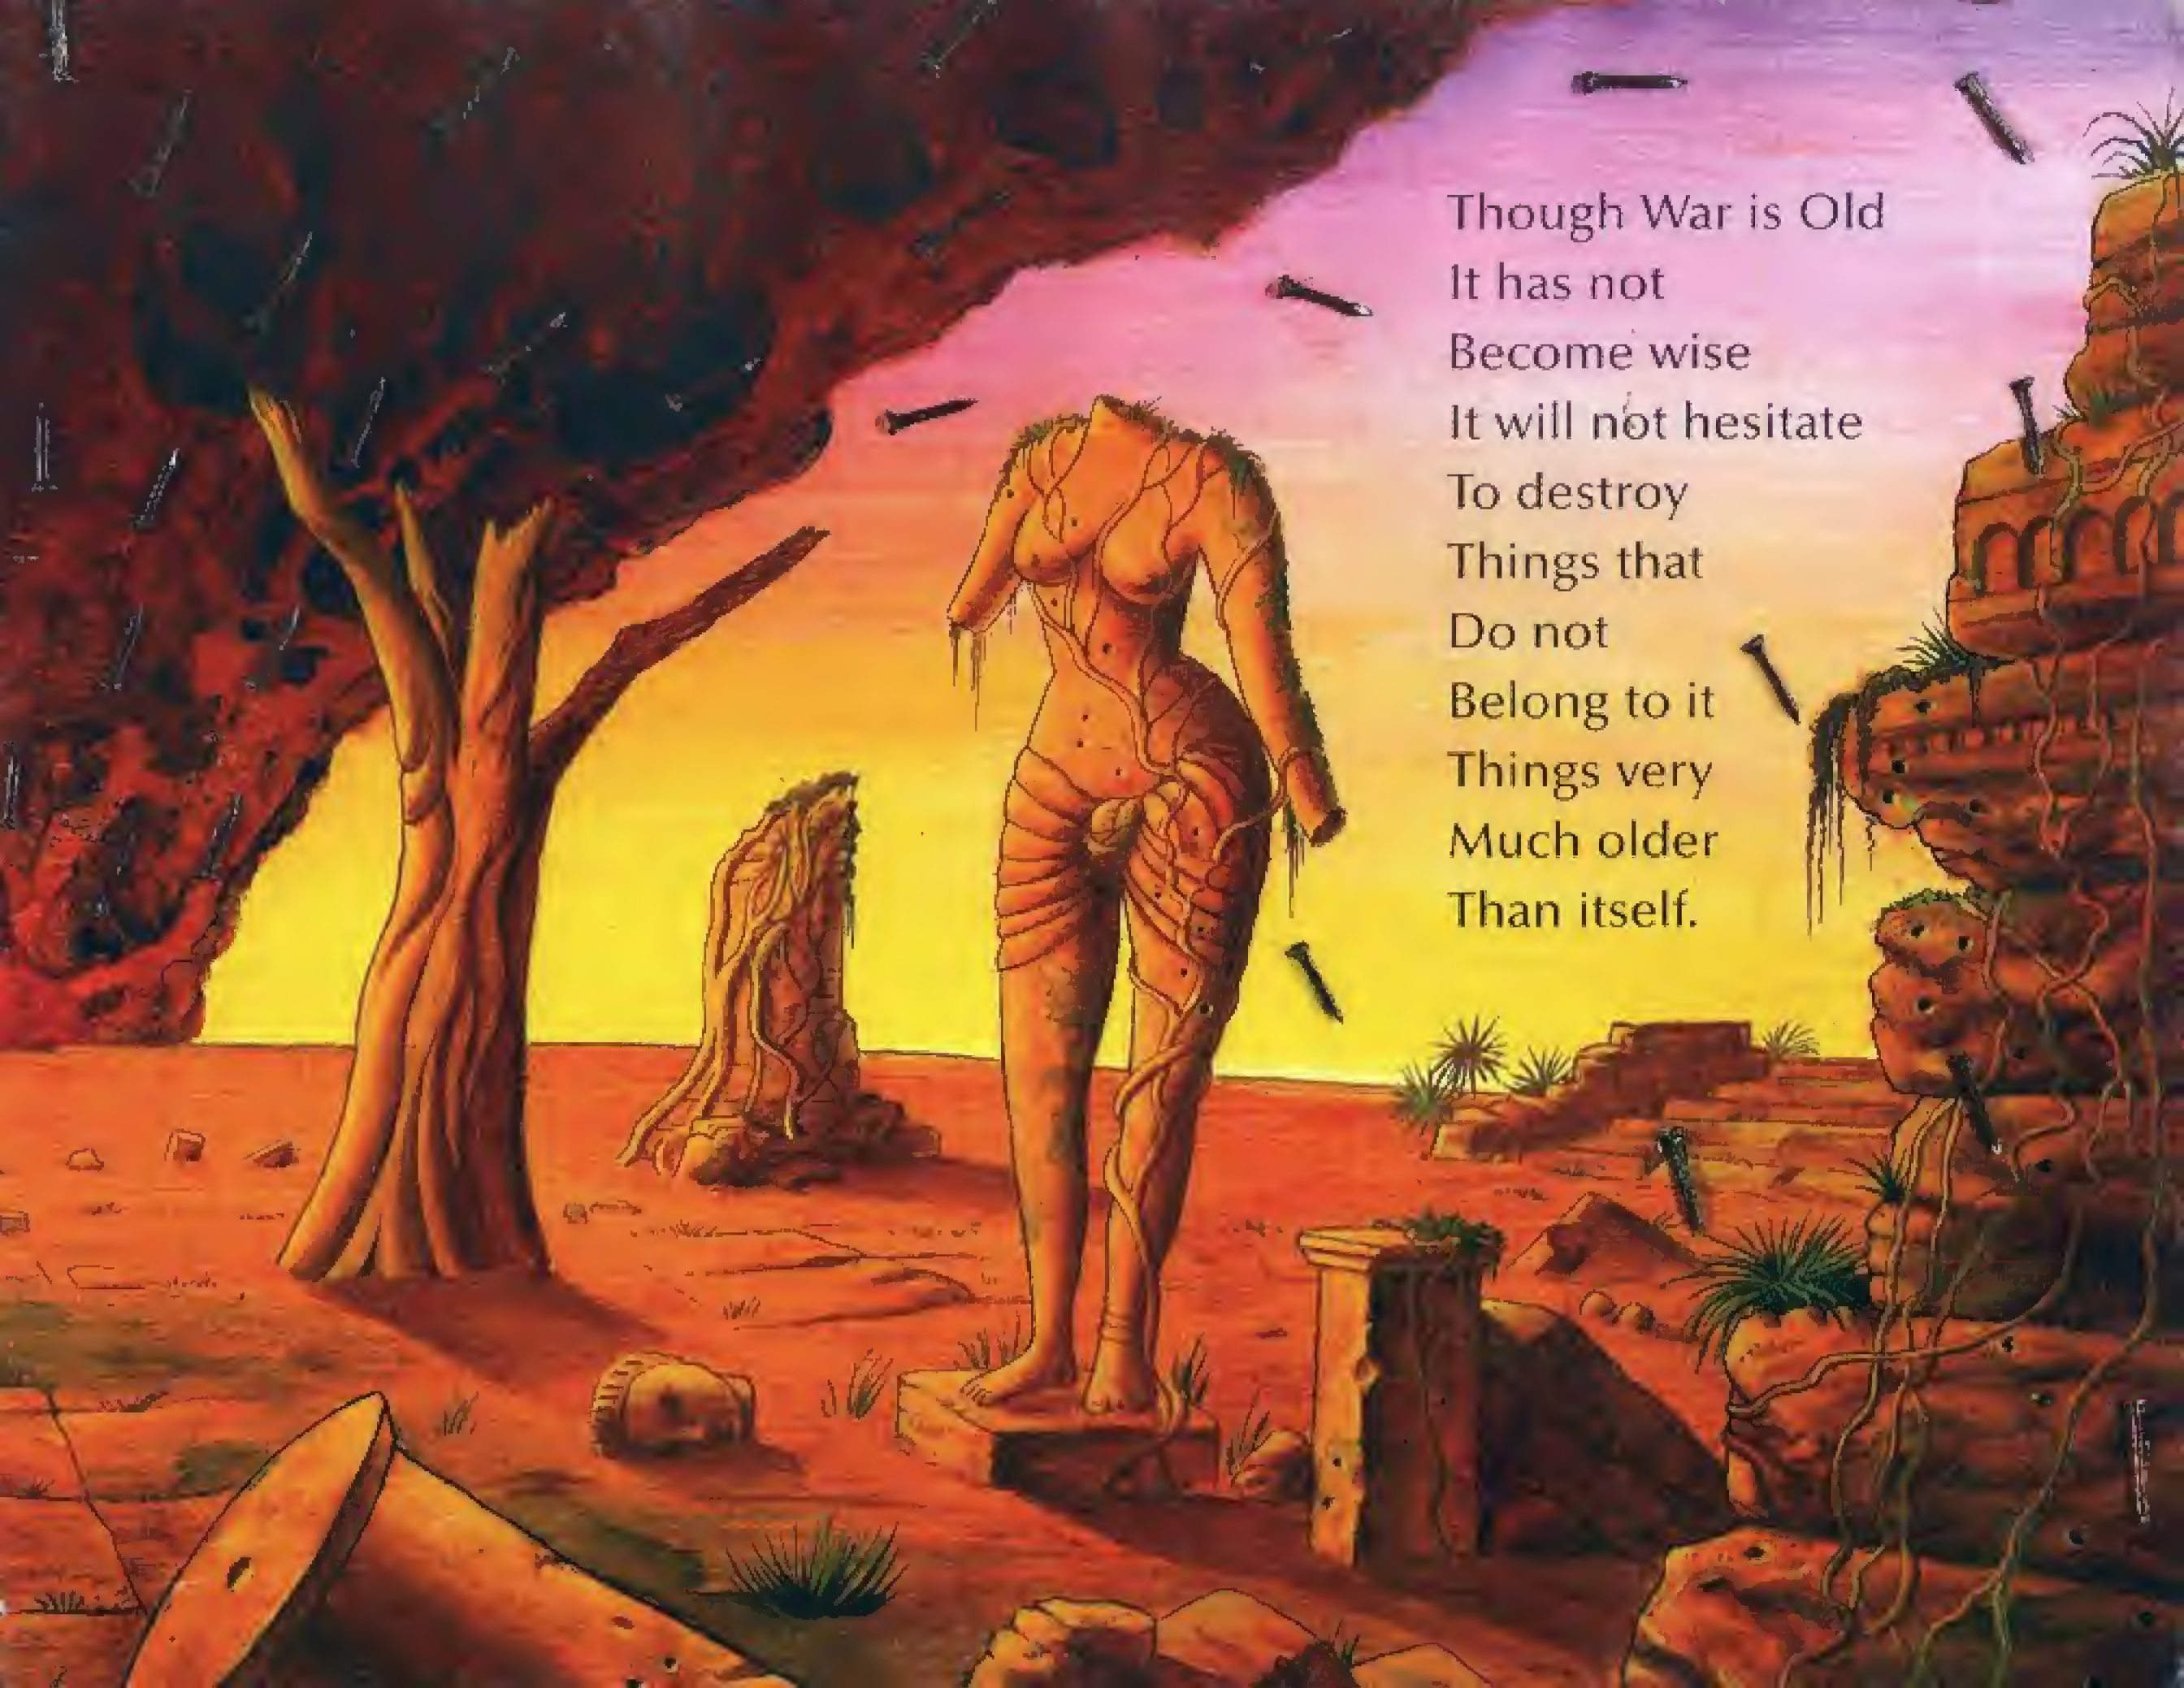

A surreal illustration of a headless woman standing in a desolate, war-torn landscape. The woman is depicted with a pale, almost white, skin tone and is adorned with intricate, dark, vine-like patterns that wrap around her torso and limbs. She stands on a small, rectangular stone pedestal. To her left is a large, gnarled tree with a thick trunk and sparse, dark foliage. In the background, a large, dark, billowing cloud of smoke or fire rises against a sky that transitions from a deep red at the top to a bright yellow at the horizon. Several dark, elongated objects, resembling bullets or shrapnel, are scattered in the air. To the right of the woman, there are ruins of ancient stone structures, some of which are partially covered in vines. The ground is a mix of reddish-brown earth and scattered stones. The overall atmosphere is one of devastation and the enduring nature of war.

Though War is Old
It has not
Become wise
It will not hesitate
To destroy
Things that
Do not Belong to it
Things very Much older
Than itself.

Picture the forest
With its
Rivers
& rocks
Its pumas
&
Its Parakeets
Its turtles
Leopards
&
Snakes.

High above them War
Has turned itself
Into a white cloud
Trailing
An Airplane
That
Dusts
Everything
Below
With
A powder
That Kills.

War has bad manners
War eats everything
In its path
& what
It doesn't
Eat
It
Dribbles
On:

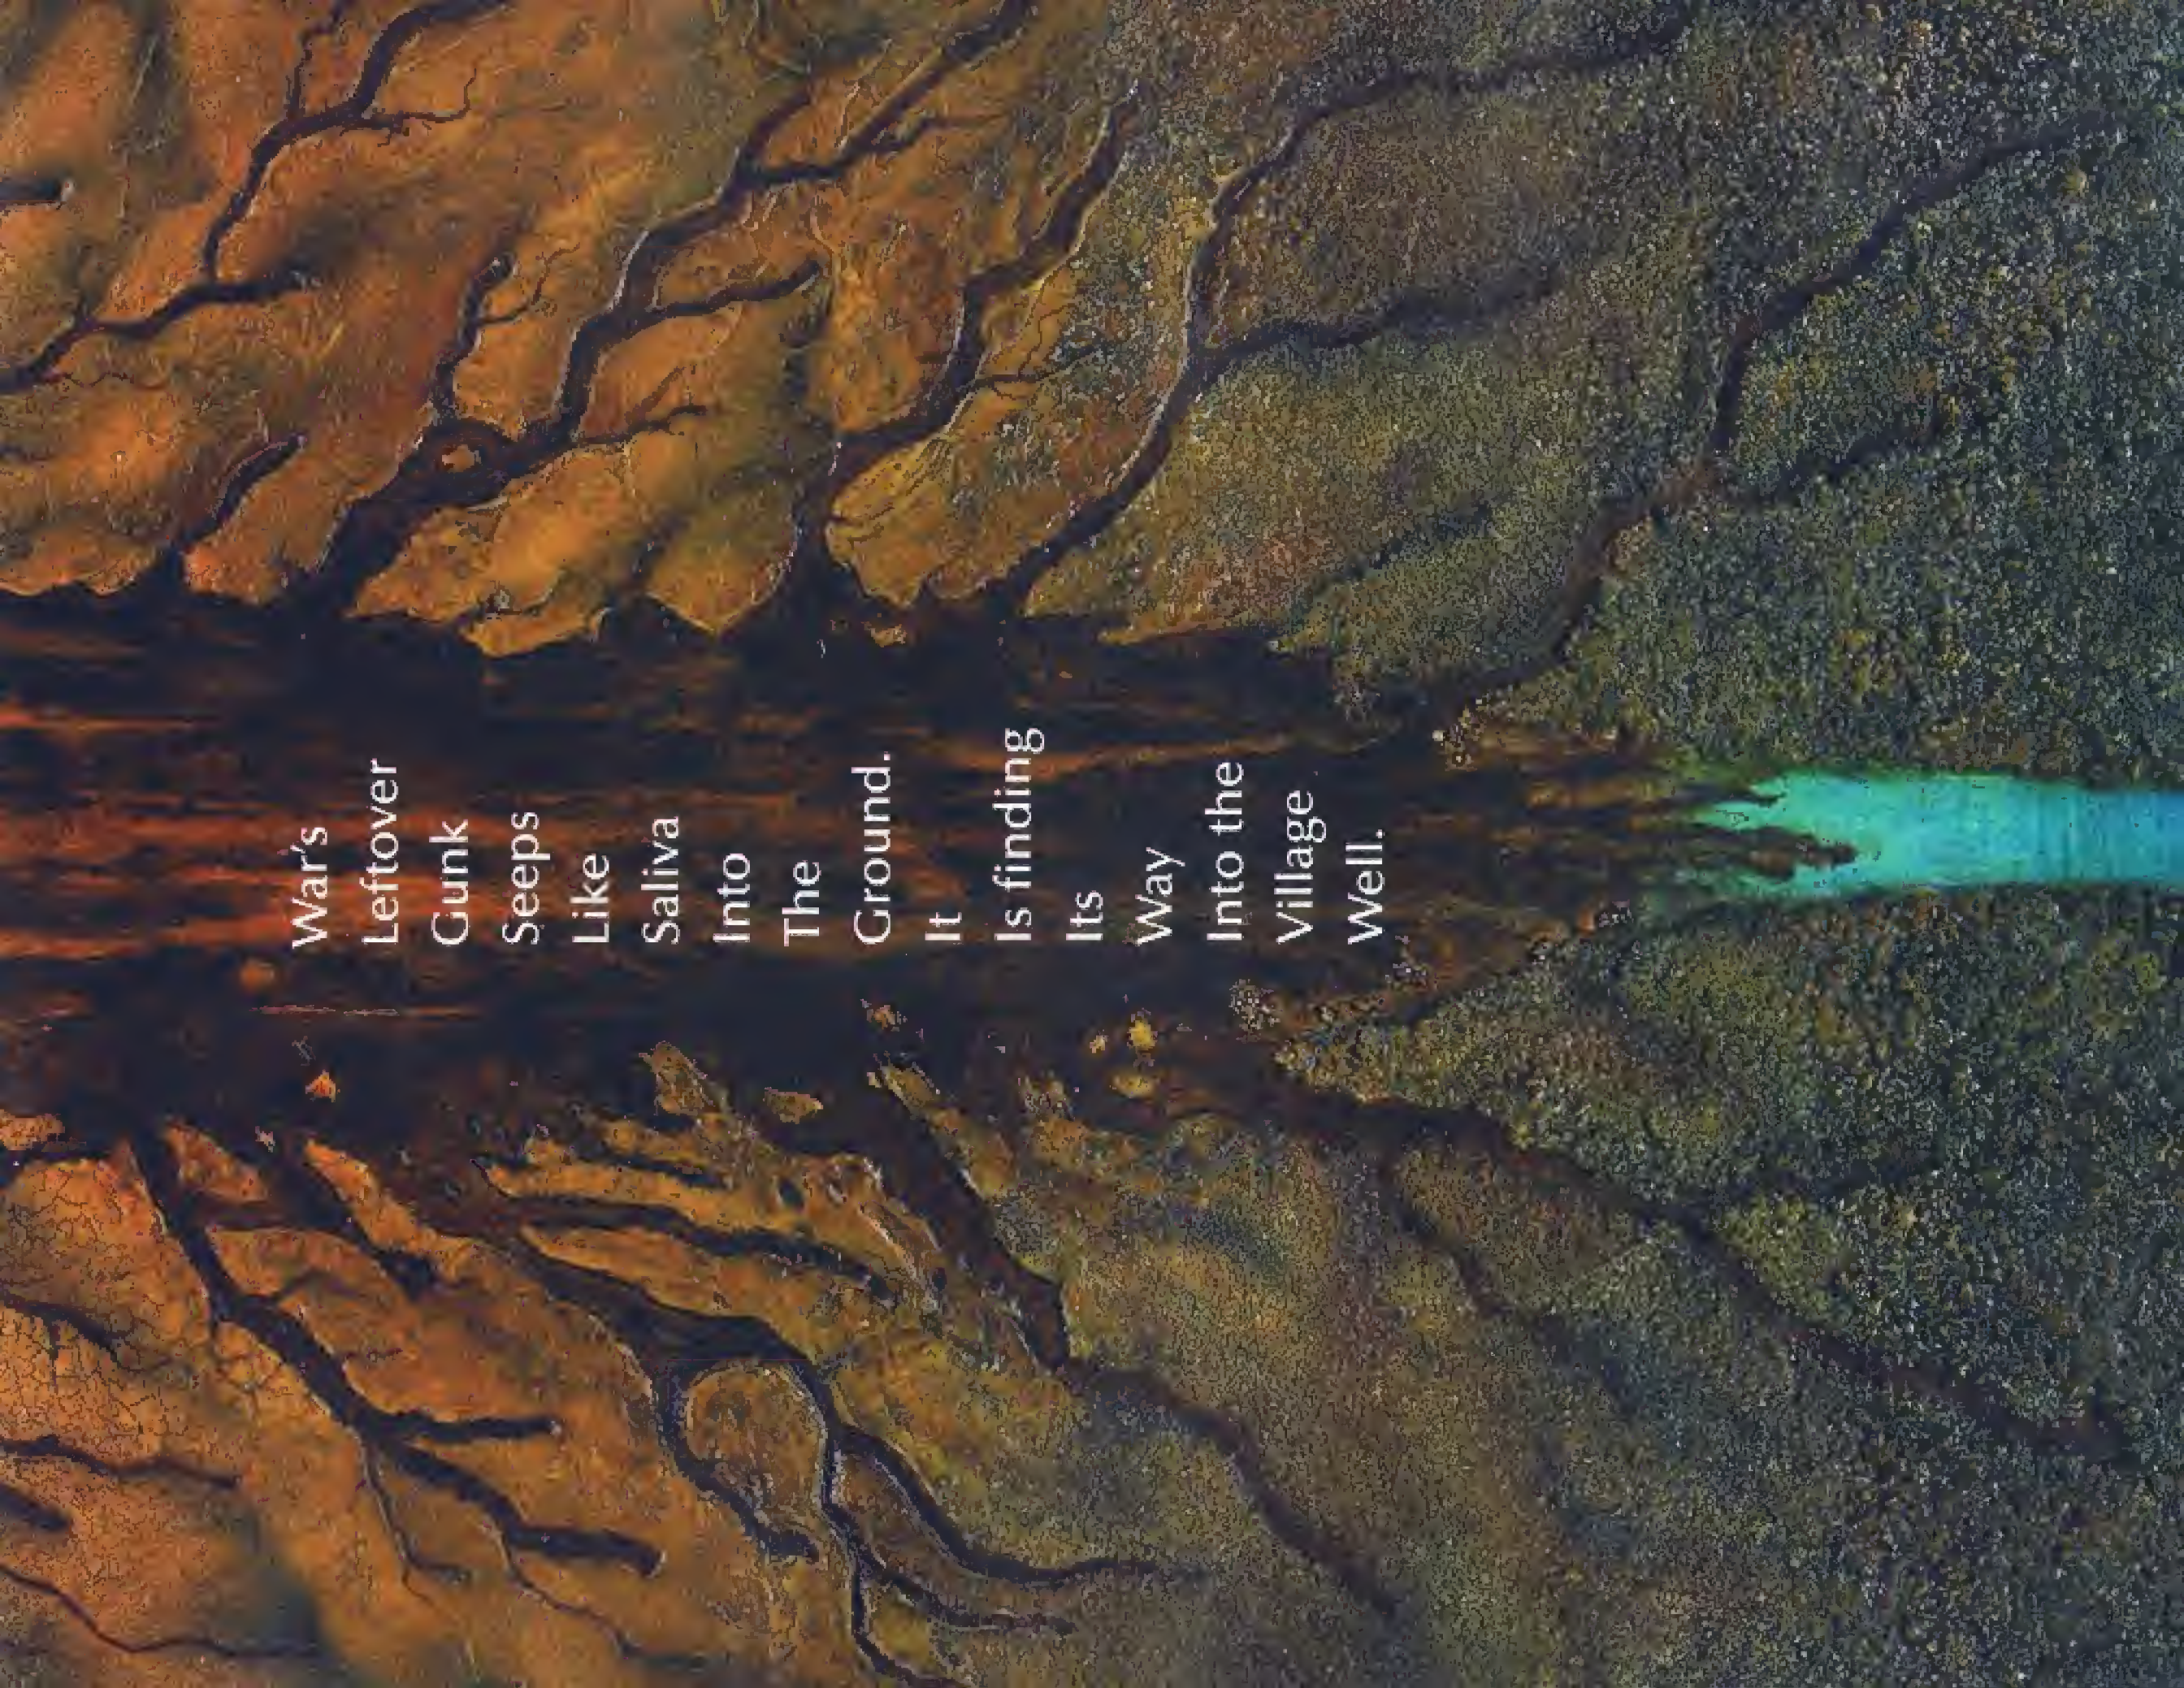

Here
War is Munching on
A village
Its missiles
Taking chunks
Big bites out
Of it.

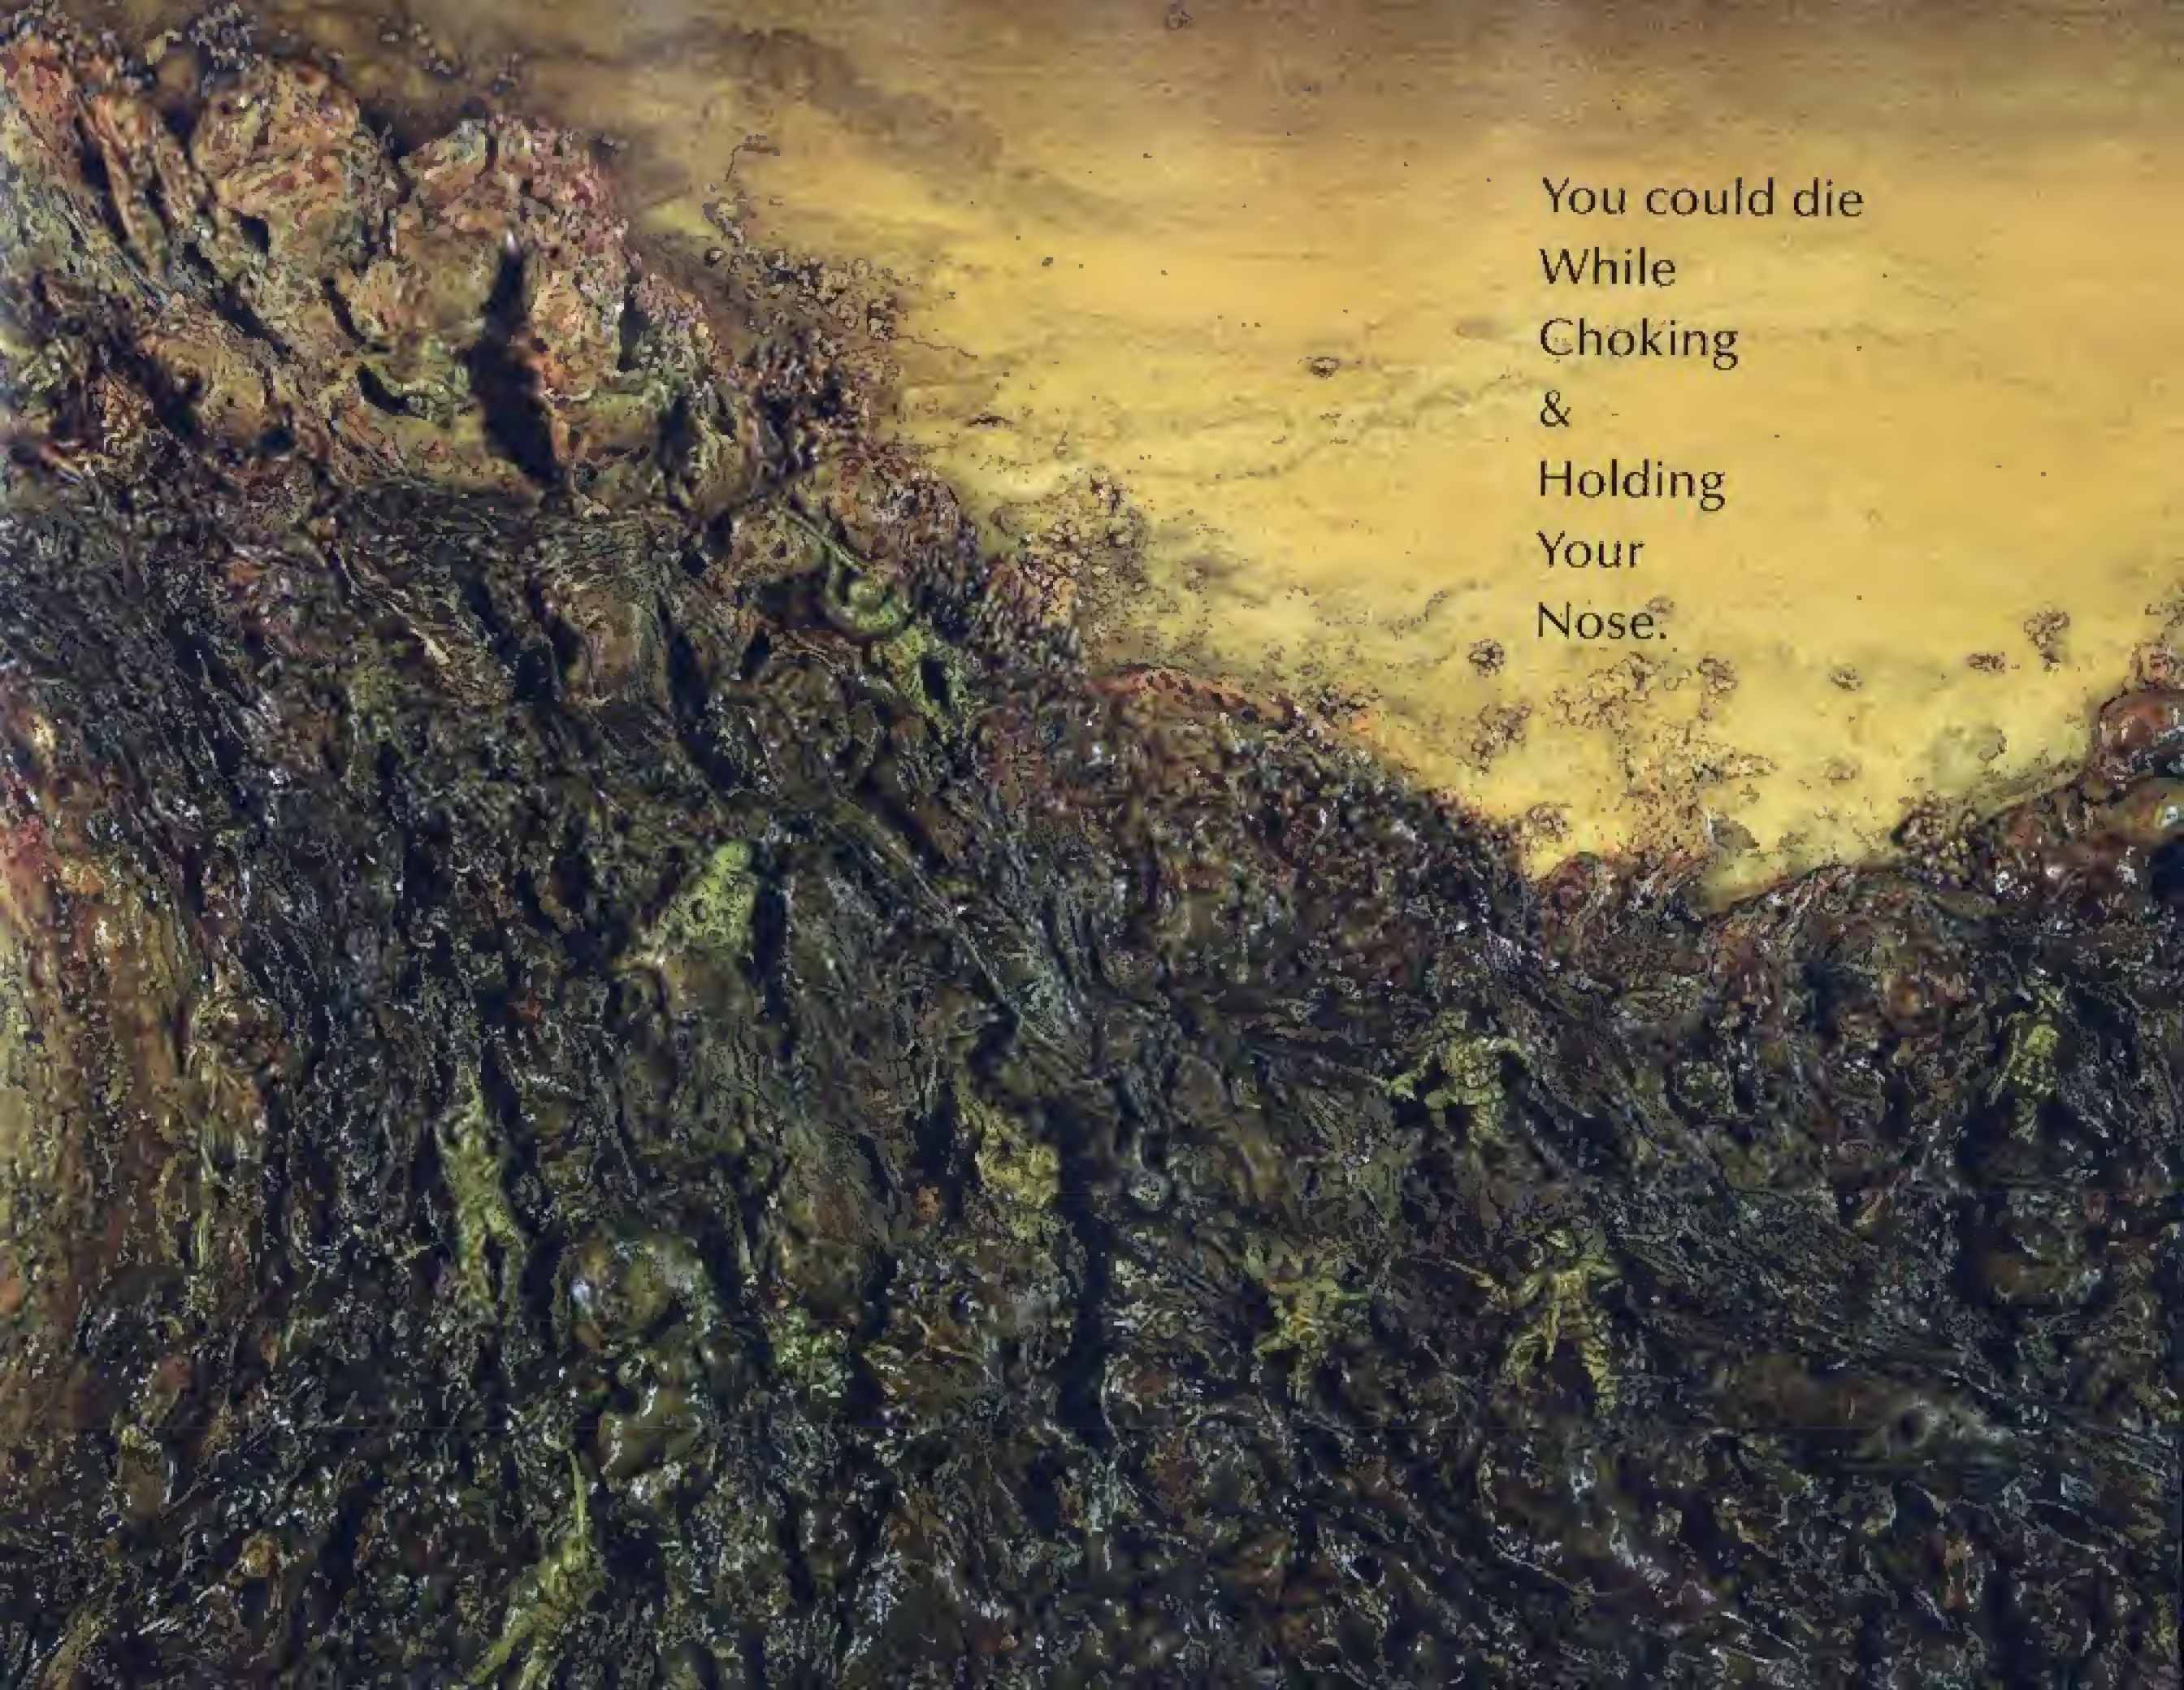

War's
Leftover
Gunk
Seeps
Like
Saliva
Into
The Ground.
It
Is finding
Its
Way
Into the Village
Well.

War tastes terrible
& smells
Bad. It never Considers Body
Odor
Or Weird
Side
Effects.
When added
To water
It makes
You sick
Sip by sip.

You could die
While
Choking
&
Holding Your Nose.

Now, suppose You
Become War
It happens
To some of
The nicest
People
On earth:
& one day
You have
To drink
The Water
In this place.
